Addiction Research & Theory

Editors-in-Chief: JOHN B. DAVIES, Centre for Applied Social Psychology, University of Strathclyde, Glasgow, Scotland, UK and FREDERICK ROTGERS, College of Social and Behavioural Sciences, Walden University, Metuchen, NJ, USA

Addiction Research & Theory is the leading outlet for research and theoretical contributions that view addictive behaviour as arising from psychological processes. The Journal aims to provoke debate with the end goal of advancing research and practice for the better. Readers benefit from cross-disciplinary coverage of the effects of context on the use and misuse of substances, and on the nature of intoxications of all kinds. A wide range of content is drawn from international sources and a variety of disciplines, examining addictive behaviours from different perspectives.

Readers of Addiction Research & Theory can be confident in the authoritative content of peer-reviewed submissions and benefit from rapid publication online, ahead of the print edition. High-quality articles cover anthropology, economics, epidemiology, medicine, sociology, psychology and history as well as other relevant areas. Subscribers also benefit from access to a wealth of important, historical information in the full digital archive, back to volume 1, issue 1.
